HON. JOHN RANDOLPH TUCKER.
[From the Richmond Enquirer.]

The name of Tucker is recognized by all as one of the first of the old Virginia patrymies, prominent in colonial times and flourishing immediately succeeding the Revolution and all the way down to the present time. The Conservatives of the Sixth district of Virginia, which is composed of the counties of Alleghany, Amherst, Appomattox, Bedford, Botetourt, Buckingham, Campbell, Nelson, Rockbridge and the city of Lynchburg, have put in nomination to represent them in the next Congress one of this same Tucker stock to wit: the Hon. John Randolph Tucker, of Lexington. He was born in the ancient city of Winchester in December, 1823 and hence lacks only a few months of being fifty-one years of age. In childhood and in youth he enjoyed every opportunity of culture and improvement that competency and affection could afford. Having laid his foundation for an education, he was sent to the University of Virginia where he pursued his studies in various schools. At this institution he took the law course, and having graduated, entered upon the practice of his profession in the city of Richmond. Here he remained for two years, and then removed to Winchester and associated himself in the practice with the Hon. R. Y. Conrad. This business connection he maintained until the year 1857, and it was only severed by his nomination by the Democratic convention and election, without opposition, to the position of Attorney General of the Commonwealth. This was a compliment, a tribute to his ability an worth, which perhaps no man of his age ever before or since received in the history of the State. In 1859 he was nominated for the same position on the ticket with Hon. John Letcher, the candidate for Governor, and defeated his competitor, Hon. Waitman T. Willey, by a majority considerably in advance of the general ticket. In 1863 he was again re-elected without opposition to the same position, and held it until he was expelled from it by military power in the spring of 1865. His services to the State during the long time he held this distinguished position are amply attested as to merit, by his repeated assignment to that post by the choice and voice of the people.

After the war Mr. Tucker retired to the county of Loudoun, and there for several years practiced his profession with success. While there, in the year 1870, he was elected Professor of Law in Washington and Lee University which he has filled with great credit to himself and acceptability to the institution up to this time. It would be a waste of time for us to attempt to tell the people of Virginia anything in regard to the position Mr. Tucker holds in the esteem of the people, not only of his own district, but of the State at large. His high culture and known abilities, with his many graces of manner, have won for him the confidence and admiration of the people, while in the social circle he has won deservedly the title of the very prince of "good fellows." Rather too undignified a title for a grave aspirant for Congressional honors—but we are writing history. So far we learn of no opposition to Mr. Tucker in his district, and every evidence indicates that he will walk over the track without the least trouble.

CALIGULA AS A LOVER.—An animated loudness was Mironia Casanova, wife of Caligula; she rendered the cruellest of men somewhat human by the love for her, he could not eradicate. Frenzied with passion for slaughter, he was anxious to kill her for no other reason than that she worshipped the dust he de-based with his tread. Madman as he unquestionably was, he suffered from the lingering sanity his single affection seems to have imposed. Unable to understand, in his moments of soundness, why there should be an exception to his universal hate, he ascribed her influence upon him to the potency of drugs secretly administered. "Tell me, thou fascinating devil," he screamed, as he clutched the poor, devoted woman by the throat; "tell me what poisons you have put in my wine thus to bind me against my will! Make confession, malignant sorceress, or the torture shall wring it from thee!"

Who but Caligula could have considered love to be poison? His blood must have been tainted as his mind. What other tyrant has ever sought to destroy one good angel of his life, merely because she was such? Miracle of feminine constancy, he could not expel adoration from her soul. The woman who could love Caligula must have been infamously affectionate. And she did love him so wildly that when he was assassinated she begged the conspirators to hide their swords in the bosom that had betrayed—Galaxy.

LUNAR VOLCANOES.—In one of the maps of the lunar surface, recently published, the bottom of the crater in one of the volcanic districts appears in many instances very deeply depressed below the general surface of the moon, the internal depth being often twice or three times the external height. It has been computed that profound cavities, regarded as craters, occupy two-fifths of the moon's surface. One of the most remarkable of these formations is fifty-five miles in diameter; and to give some idea of its magnitude, the late Professor Nichol used to say that, could a volcano approach it, he would see rising before him a wall of rock twelve hundred feet high, and, on mounting this height, would look down on a declivity or slope thirteen thousand feet, to a lower deep of four thousand feet more—a cavity exceeding, therefore, the height of Mt. Blanc, and large enough to hold that mountain, besides Chimborazo and Teneriffe. Another crater called Sausure, is ten thousand feet in depth. These astounding calculations are founded—as is doubtless well understood—on the observation of the sun's light falling on the edge, and illuminating the sides of these profound depths.
